1.EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The criteria that I used when picking where I would do my service-based learning was first considering multiple aspects such as serving the community, learning morals and virtues, getting more in touch with people on a one-on-one basis, and exposing myself to different experiences. After much consideration and going through the list that had been compiled by the school as well as a personal dig for information on relevant organisations. I received information about a non-governmental organisation known as Positive Life Kenya and after hearing a bit about what they do, how they run, and how they help the community I was intrigued.

I did my own personal research about this organisation on social media, though at the time it wasn't very active. By the end of my stay, they had become a bit more present virtually. Walking into the organisation to meet the relevant heads, I introduced myself and stated my purpose. I gave them the school's introductory letter and was accepted since they do receive international interns -having a local one would make things a bit more interesting, and it would be a good change of pace.

My contract wasn't very complicated. It was quite simple, they would provide an afternoon meal, and money for transport -which came later or rather it was implemented later. I didn't receive pay and personally, I wanted to feel that I was volunteering and helping the community thus earning would have stood in the way of my objective. My job definition included working together with other employees who became my colleagues and friends later on. I'd go into the field on home visits, teach women at Faraja, which is the community outreach and rescue centre. I also had the task of being a teacher at two of the schools, a mentor to some students, and helping generally as an intern with other miscellaneous tasks such as painting.

2. INTRODUCTION TO THE ORGANISATION

Mission and Vision

Mission - Positive Life Kenya works to break the cycle of poverty by promoting active participation of communities through education and advocacy to build a healthy environment for children to thrive and create lasting change.

Vision - To see healthy and empowered communities living with hope and equal opportunities.

(Positive Life Kenya, n.d.)

History

PLK was started by Mary Wabwire in 2010 as a small Community Based Organization known as 'Living Positive Mlolongo' and became the non-governmental organisation 'Positive Life Kenya' in 2015.

Field of interest

Its programmes range from child and youth welfare to livelihood and even health.

In child and youth welfare it advocates on: Education and Early Childhood Development through its two schools: New Tumaini Education Center in Syokimau and Kiotani School in Lukenya, Life skills through empowering youth and individuals to make responsible choices that positively benefit both themselves and the community at large, Advocacy through giving youth a platform to express themselves and engage with leaders in their communities. One such program they set into motion is known as ‘Breaking The Silence’.

On livelihood their areas of practice include Skills Trade (Faraja), Microfinance, and Enterprise Development, Agricultural Projects, Income Generating Activities, Water Distribution Problems, and Climate Change, Emergency Response, Civic Engagement, Negotiation Skills, and Poverty Reduction Strategies and Advocacy.

On health some of their areas of work include Health Prevention, Promotion & Referrals, Mental Health, Nutrition and Deworming, Menstrual Hygiene, and Health Communications and Advocacy.

The Challenges they face include insufficient Funding for projects, little cooperation from the Authorities and the concerned bodies, and Dropout cases

3. DESCRIPTION OF ATTACHMENT

3.1 Weekly Timetable

Branding, school visits, and health awareness.

The Health Awareness project informs the women who are involved in educational programs from Faraja about cancer and health issues. As an addition to our presentation, we were able to provide more information that would be able to address their concerns.

Branding the water tank project located at New Hope Tumaini and at city carton for advertisement and ownership purposes. Interaction with students at Kiotani.

Education and youth counselling.

The Education programme is designed to provide information to the community, e.g., students in primary schools. The volunteers take the roles of the teacher and engage with the students.

The Youth Counselling programme provides mental support and career guidance advice to young adults who are in need of those.

Community outreach

The Community Outreach project creates a safe space for families by site visits, creating financial support through business opportunities, providing counselling including emotional support, and finding other ways to improve their way of life. Through this program, home visits are done to identify the needs of our clients.

3.2 Description of Workstation

Date: 23rd to 27th January 2023

Purpose of the Activity:

Introduce us to the team and the field, educate women at Faraja on health, and menstrual hygiene and loop cup, follow up on the community at the slums and the family at Mavoko, and preparation for school activities.

Objectives:

1. To gather information of their current situation and form a plan on how to assist the families in the future.
2. To raise awareness about cervical cancer and the importance of regular check-ups.
3. To raise awareness about menstrual hygiene and how to use loop cup.
4. To raise awareness about the organization and other benefactors of the school and the slums.
5. Restoration of school facilities in preparation for re-opening.

On Tuesday we had orientation with the team where I was introduced to members of the team and shown around the office. I was later accompanied by Agnes and Faith to City Carton Slum to see the established water project and families, and tank branding. Afterwards I was in attendance of the area chief's baraza on bursaries for school-going children, accompanied by Agnes. We then Delegated duties for weekly presentation in the evening.

On Wednesday, I was given a tour of the school at Kiotani and interacted with the students, accompanied by Judy. We then went back to the office to work on weekly presentation about menstrual hygiene. There was Orientation of new member to the team. Afterwards I was accompanied by Gladys and Faith to Kicheko Slum to visit families and New Hope Tumaini and then given a tour of the school and the neighborhood.

On Thursday, I participated in educating the women at Faraja about menstrual hygiene and loop cup use, with the help of Judy, Agnes, and Mary. We also taught them about cervical cancer and encouraged them to get tested. Afterwards we visited a mother and her disabled children in Mavoko.

On Friday, we met with the team to discuss the progress and challenges of the week, wrote field report for the week, and created a plan for next week.

30th January to 3rd February 2023

Purpose of the Activity:

Educate the girls in Kiotani and Kwa Kalusya primary school on menstrual hygiene and the loop cup, deliver the new uniforms. Held an English lesson in Tumaini school. Educate the women at Faraja on financial literacy. Paid a visit to two bed ridden families.

Objectives:

1. To gather information of their current situation and form a plan on how to assist the families in the future.
2. To raise awareness of menstrual hygiene and the loop cup.
3. To educate the students on English, articles specifically.
4. To ensure that the participants were directed in the right direction for their future.

On Monday, I was accompanied by Faith on a Kiotani visit, for loop cup training and distribution of new uniforms to junior secondary. Requested to train the older girls in grade 6, 7 and 8 on menstrual health and hygiene and the loop cup. The session went on well and the class was interactive and open, they freely asked questions and advised each other to abstain from sex even though they had boyfriends. We later, headed to Kwa Kalusya primary school where we took two desks and a chair for admissions for Daniel, Joyce,

Lucia and Rose, students in the company program. We were then given grade 6 and 8 girls whom we took through menstrual health and hygiene and demonstrated how to use a loop cup. The class started in a low mood but as we progressed the children got more involved and asked questions and wrote anonymous questions which would be answered in the following session. At Kiotani we met the Invicta child foundation NGO working with sponsorship programs where they support children with different sponsorship programs. We discussed meeting for more networking. I was afterwards accompanied by Mary for a family planning lesson held at Faraja. Some of the topics discussed included describing what family planning is in detail and the side effects each method has on a person's body, importance of family planning and the various ways of carrying out family planning encompassing modern methods as well as the natural methods.

On Tuesday, accompanied by Judy and Faith, all the interns went on a visit to Tumaini school in the Kicheko slum. Assisted the school staff in distributing the milk biscuits to the children and other interns helped serve the porridge. Interacted with the kids by engaging them in a game called Red Rover. The students seemed to love it and caught on quickly. After the game, while Zerlina, Titus and Manda stayed at the school to teach the children, Tim and I went for a home visit. Later Visiting Lavinah Musungu, an estranged wife and mother of twins with special needs, raised her spirits since felt that she still had people who cared about her. The kids were home alone since she was out trying to eke out a living with no one to care for her kids while she was away. She arrived afterwards and we were able to hear her out and give her a bit of hope to keep on living for her future as well as her kids'. In the evening, the social work team and we had discussions on finances, with the women at Faraja. The discussion revolved around tips on saving some cash for a course, business tips, and planning with the resources around us without necessarily having to indulge in debts.

On Wednesday, we paid a visit to a HIV positive beneficiary at Kathangaita, a single lady with 3 children. One of her children was also living with AIDS. Encouraged them to adhere to their drugs and be punctual when following their prescription. She also received psychosocial support. She was not feeling well when we arrived but was trying to make food for her kids. She is truly hard-working and tries her best to feed her children. At the office we prepared notes and did research for the youth counselling session on career guidance for some students who had just completed their secondary education. Our goal was to create a short lecture as well as a safe space where they could openly talk about their desires, expectations, doubts, and fears. We were also researching techniques on how to motivate them and find an appropriate approach for those who haven't got a plan. A financial literacy lesson was then prepared for the women in Faraja. We addressed various topics such as good spending habits, various ways of saving money, how to allocate money to their needs, and possible side hustles that could help them earn extra money such as poultry rearing.

On Thursday, was accompanied by Judy and Mary when educating the women at Faraja about financial literacy and budgeting. Later counselled two youth on career guidance, Yvonne, and Jackson. Yvonne had an overall grade of C, and an interest in electrical engineering since she was quite handy in fixing electrical appliances around the house. She had some concerns due to her low grades in math and science. Encouraged her to start with a diploma and work her way up as it would be easier with her grades. Jackson's overall grade was a D, and he had an interest in graphic design, heavy machinery operation and teaching. Of the three, graphic design interested him most. His concerns were more personal in relation to his parents' acceptance of the university of his choice, so we sought professional assistance from other employees. I then helped facilitate orientation for Trucie and Timothy, new interns. We later headed to City Carton for home visits to find out why some of the children had not reported to school.

On Friday, we met with the team to discuss the progress and challenges of the week, wrote a field report for the week, and created a plan for the following week.

6th to 10th February 2023

Purpose of the Activity:

Conducted a home visit for the bedridden at Mlolongo, assisted teachers at New Hope Tumaini in formulating diagrams and drawing charts for learning purposes, conducted a follow up for needy kids at City Carton who need school fees, trained women on how to fill Loop Cup questionnaires at Women Empowerment Centre (Faraja).

Objectives:

1. To gather information of their current situation and form a plan on how to assist the families in the future.
2. To raise awareness of menstrual hygiene and the loop cup.
3. To educate the Social Work team together with the Interns on matters regarding online data analysis.
4. To ensure that the participants were directed in the right direction for their future.

On Monday, I was accompanied by Faith, Titus, Timothy, Benedict, and Gladys, in conducting Mlolongo home visits for the beneficiaries of the organization. We then visited a previously bedridden beneficiary who stayed alone. After conversing with him, we found out that he had partially recovered from the accident-induced injuries and could walk freely without crutches. The organization provided him with some foodstuff such as flour to sustain him till he could fend for himself. Additionally, he was expected to meet his lawyer the following day for a follow-up on his case which was pending in court. We then Visited one of the beneficiaries, Lavinah Musungu, with physically challenged children and found that the children had had no food for lunch or breakfast. The organization later catered for her short-term needs as it worked on a feasible long-term solution.

On Tuesday, I was accompanied by Judy and fellow interns to New Hope for fun activities with the kids. We executed some extracurricular activities such as training them self-defense through karate and played with them during the break. We were also involved in drawing class charts -which included pictures of various fruits, types of clothes, and different parts of the human body- that the children could use to learn.

On Wednesday we visited City Carton accompanied by Titus, Judy, and Benedict. One of the beneficiaries at City Carton, who specialized in selling vegetables, confirmed that her business was thriving. We met with a group of women who were engaged in weaving activities and wishing to be supported by the organization to expand their businesses and later visited the person in charge of the water project at City Carton slum that facilitated good access of fresh water.

On Thursday I was Accompanied by Judy, James, Catherine, Anisia, and Timothy, in educating the women at Faraja on how to fill Loop Cup questionnaires. Afterwards, we visited Kanani, Bawasiti. The people in that place were pushed out by the government with only a few people left there. I later met with one beneficiary who has a physically challenged child but seemed reluctant to be helped. One child finished standard eight but did not go to high school, she was advised to go to see the chief for assistance the following day.

On Friday, we met with the team to discuss the progress and challenges of the week, wrote a field report for the week, and created a plan for the following week.

13th to 17th February 2023

Purpose of the Activity:

Gather data on the loop cup and visit the women in Kicheko and Sabaki. Promote merchandise for the Maasai women near Sabaki. Hold an English lesson in Tumaini school. Educate the women at Faraja on first aid.

Objectives:

- To gather information of their current situation and form a plan on how to assist the families in the future.
- To raise awareness of menstrual hygiene and the loop cup.
- To educate the students on English, articles specifically.
- To ensure that the participants were directed in the right direction for their future.

On Monday, we began preparing a lesson for our coming visit to Faraja on Thursday about first aid tips and most effective steps to take in various scenarios such as when someone stops breathing or starts bleeding. Accompanied by Faith, Timothy, and Titus, I went to New Hope Tumaini school where we taught the lower primary children in class as well as sorted out the textbooks for use and those to be transported to Kiotani School for the new classes introduced there.

On Tuesday, I was Accompanied by Timothy and Titus to New Hope Tumaini school in teaching the lower primary children English and Science as well as karate training with grades 1,2,3 and preparatory 2, and 3 in the afternoon.

On Wednesday, we further prepared for the first aid lesson for the women in Faraja to be conducted the following day. I was accompanied by Timothy and Titus to New Hope Tumaini school where I had karate training with grades 1,2,3 and preparatory 2, and 3 after breaktime. There was an afternoon class session with the pupils that entailed a bit of teaching and assigning homework to be done over the evening at home and marked the following day.

On Thursday, I was accompanied by Titus, Timothy, and the Tumaini school Cook to visit Fridah Wangui in Kicheko Slum, Syokimau as part of a scouting expedition to understand her home situation. She has four kids aged 11, 8, 5 and 3, of whom 3 study at New Hope Tumaini School. One Kid was to be sponsored by her aunt, but the new school had not yet been known. The kids studying in New Hope Tumaini had fee arrears. Ever since the schools' reopening, the kids had not reported, but did so a week prior. She depended on daily wages like laundry work. The kids could only get one meal a day. Most of the time she depended on meals the children got in school to keep them fed. The husband had not been taking on any familial or paternal duties and had deserted them quite a while back. She requested to be helped with raising school fees for her kids and necessities like food. At times she depended on credit and soft loans to feed her children. She had no access to safe water for domestic use in her household, and had some pending rent arrears, but couldn't open enough on matters regarding her housing situation. She lived in a single-roomed house that goes for 1500 per month.

On Friday we met as a team to discuss the progress and challenges of the week, write a field report for the week, and create a plan for next week. I later took part in sorting and rearranging books from the store to be redistributed to the pupils and staff in New Hope Tumaini as well as Kiotani school.

20th to 24th February.

Purpose of the activity

To travel to Kiotani and interact with the students boarding there. To teach them in classes and interact with them outside classes will. Some of the extracurricular activities that we were supposed to engage in included: music, martial arts, dancing, football.

Objectives

- Teaching classes
- Teach karate.
- Prepare for Cultural day.
- interacts with and get to know students.

On Monday we sorted out books and luggage to travel with to Kiotani. We were introduced to the teachers, workers, and students and given a tour of the school so as to get a good idea of where the facilities are. We settled down in the dormitories in the evening.

On Tuesday, we made a lesson plan and participated in fixing the timetable. We met for training with students who were interested in learning karate. I met and interacted with some of the children who were beneficiaries of the organisation and that I had met over their holidays during home visits. In the evening, we interacted with children in a life skills session and had a heart to heart about the experiences at school.

On Wednesday, I taught mathematics and science to grade six and seven students. Later had an afternoon training karate with the students who were selected to join the team. As well as an evening training session with the Team in the dining hall. We Played football with the boys in the field during their free period before supper. Afterwards, we had a music session with Timothy being the coordinator of the students.

On Thursday, I taught mathematics and English to grade six and seven students. During the afternoon session as well as the evening session we had karate with my team I then Coordinated students in preparing the school for the cultural day and events that would be conducted the following day.

On Friday, the Students presented the dances, songs other presentations to the donors of the school. The donors were taken on a tour of the school to see the changes and development of the area. We finished our boarding and travelled back to Positive life Kenya offices in the evening.

27th February to 3rd March

Purpose of the activity

To debrief on the experiences at Kiotani, and what they would need to improve on. Educate the women at Faraja on entrepreneurship, savings plan, and income management.

Objectives

- Settle down back at the office.
- Debrief about experiences at Kiotani school.
- Educate women at Faraja.
- Finalise my internship.

Settled back at office on Monday. Later had a meeting to give a debrief with the higher ups.

Compiled the physical reports about the boarding experience at Kiotani and sorted out papers for students in the organisation.

Did research on the lesson to be prepared for the women at Faraja on Wednesday and completed sorting out documents and finally filing.

On Thursday, I interacted with and taught the women about entrepreneurship income management, and savings plans. Eventually, I bid goodbye to the women and children at Faraja.

On Friday I finalised on the organisation procedures for interns. Wrote a mini review or summary about my internship experience in the organisation in their journal and Had a mini goodbye party at the office as well as at Faraja.

4. Impact of the Internship

Challenges:

When giving presentations to the women at Faraja, the main challenges were, trying to break the ice, being late delayed presentation time hence interfering with the Faraja schedule. When visiting the Kiotani school it was challenging to engage students in the discussion. The transportation costs were troublesome. During the visit paid to Francis, Anastasia, and their mother Lavinah Musungu, it was overall a difficult situation to emotionally navigate since she had no support from family or friends. Another challenge that was faced was the minor language barrier while educating the students at the Tumaini school and communicating with elderlies who only knew a lick of Swahili or English in City Carton slum. The cultural differences made it harder to create a lesson on financial literacy and budgeting for the women at Faraja. Another challenge surfaced when we were out on home visits. Some people seemed to be in a very difficult situation where they went days without a meal, but we had nothing to offer them.

Recommendations:

Get or hire a company vehicle for long distance fieldwork e.g., Kiotani.

Punctuality and communication in case of tardiness or any inconveniences.

Increasing the number of presentation samples when women and children groups are visited.

Counting the number of participants during fieldwork and recording in books for future reference purposes.

Have more interactive sessions with the women at Faraja for the following weeks.

Schedule regular visits with the family in Mavoko area to at the very least support her emotionally and psychologically.

Consult more with the locals to get over the cultural differences and have a better understanding of the practices and traditions here.

Always have a translator to get over the language barrier.

More counselling to be conducted for the beneficiaries.

More support to be offered to beneficiaries who are in critical situations.

The organization agreed to provide transportation fees for interns.

Impact of the internship

I have come to the end of my stay and the duration with Positive Life Kenya. To be honest, I have learned quite a lot, experienced a lot. I have seen different perspectives to life, and that was what I had been aiming for. In as much as I am not world ignorant, knowing a bit about how the world works as well as that there's so many facets to life, this has been an eye-opening experience. I loved my internship there. I know the school wanted us to have this to experience to get a feel of volunteering, helping in the community, and learn, at least that's what I hope was the goal. Therefore, I came with an open mind to learn to know people and to interact with people in different societal standards and that's what I did.

5. Conclusions

Positive Life Kenya's employees are devoted and passionate about their work. They go out every day seeking to change lives, better them, and see growth or rather productive change in the society. The drive they portray, and the work ethics is good. The organisation is growing as a whole and expanding the regions it is active in.

I feel my SBL was not wasted. I have found even further motivation and drive to make it in life and help people out there struggling to make ends meet, struggling to provide for their families and this is the chance that I'm going to use to achieve my, as well as PLK's, dreams.

The organization requires as much support and funding as possible and I am going to approach the university's relevant offices to get these wonderful people connected with the school in some if not most of their activities. Hopefully it works out.

Positive Life Kenya on Instagram: “Initially named Living Positive Mlolongo, our organization started as a small Community Based Organization (CBO) in 2010 in Mlolongo, Kenya. When our founder, Mary Wabwire, was doing social work in hospitals and neighborhoods in Mlolongo, she became aware of the lack of services and support for HIV positive individuals as well as their children. Due to the demand for additional services in other areas outside of Mlolongo, in 2015 we obtained official status as a Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) with the new name: Positive Life Kenya. This change allows us to obtain a tax exemption status and continue expanding our efforts to reach out to as many families as possible. Today, we serve more than 4,200 people in eight different slums and informal settlements.
